

From: Juan P. Sales
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/17/01 8:46am
Subject: Fox

I live in Brazil and when I try to access the local Fox website, www.mundofox.com.br using Linux Red Hat with Opera browser, I get a warning saying that my Operating System may present errors in the visualization of the site and suggesting the use of Windows 98:

Nossos sistemas detectaram que você está usando um sistema operacional que pode encontrar alguns erros na visualização das páginas do nosso site. Os sistemas operacionais recomendados são: Windows 98 ou superior.

This is the kind of attitude that MS is promoting among webmasters worldwide. It's a clearly monopolistic attitude, which stands against my freedom of choosing what OS and browser I want to use.

If sites around the world are having this attitude, it's because of Microsoft forcing them or giving them advantages (discounts or something like that).

I thought that you were supposed to defend the rights of the common people, but with the proposed agreement, you seem to defend the right of MS and other big companies by imposing their products upon us.

--

Juan P. Sales

Sen. Vergueiro 45 / 1102 Flamengo
Rio de Janeiro
Brazil